Students will learn how to approach and properly document crime scenes, will be given an introduction into crime scene photography, basic fingerprinting techniques, casting of footprints and tire tracks, use of alternate light sources, demonstration of other available crime scene investigation equipment, and an actual field training exercise to demonstrate the skills learned.

Course Number	Course Title	Theory/Lab (clock hours)
CSI401	Crime Scene Photography	10/30	40 Total

Course description:

Lectures will review crime scene documentation, which include basic camera concepts, formatting a proper image, lighting techniques, terminology, common settings for digital cameras and nomenclature. Students will learn techniques for manual photography including aperture, shutter speed, focus, depth-of-field and proper lighting, including the use of an alternate light source. We will also discuss legal standards for admissibility of photographs in court. The students will be divided into teams and will engage in the practical exercise of photographing four simulated crime scenes, both indoors and outdoors, and in light and darkness.

Course Number	Course Title	Theory/Lab (clock hours)
CSI501	Latent Print Processing	12/28	40 Total

Course description

The student will learn the skills and current industry standard techniques necessary for the detection, development, collection and preservation of fingerprint evidence. The student will learn a variety of collection techniques by using a variety of materials, including Super Glue applications, small particle reagent, various methods for processing the adhesive side of tape, chemical methods and mechanical methods for the processing of latent prints. Participants will be broken into small groups where each will be given the opportunity to process fingerprints at simulated crime scenes; they will locate, identify, collect and preserve prints from various porous and non-porous substrates, utilizing learned techniques.

Course Number	Course Title	Theory/Lab (clock hours)
CSI701	Alternative Light Source Applications	8/16	24 Total

Course description:

This course is designed to introduce students to the use of the visible light spectrum to enhance organic and inorganic substances that otherwise may be overlooked in a criminal investigation. Students will learn how light affects some biological fluids often left at crime scenes, causing absorption, fluorescence, luminescence and contrast with the target surface. We will also cover documentation, preservation and collection techniques.

Course Number	Course Title	Theory/Lab (clock hours)
CSI801	Arson Investigations	12/28	40 Total

Course description:

The student will learn the basic role of an arson investigator/fire marshal when at the scene of a crime involving incendiary devices, accelerants, and other means of intentional fire setting. Burn patterns, seat of the fire, and differentiating between accidental or intentional. Fires will be the focus of this course.

Course Number	Course Title	Theory/Lab (clock hours)
CSI1001	Bloodstain Pattern Analysis	12/28	40 Total

Course description:

This course is designed to give students a basic understanding of the uses and limitations of bloodstain pattern analysis to include the components and nature of blood, physics and mathematics associated with bloodstain analysis (area of convergence and area of origin calculation techniques), presumptive testing procedures using various chemicals, the cause and appearance of various patterns including drips, impacts, cast-off, transfers, pools, voids and other patterns, enhancement of latent bloodstains using light and chemical applications and crime scene safety and biohazard awareness. Course time is designed to give students a maximum amount of time in the bloodstain laboratory area, both creating and performing analysis on actual blood patterns.

Course Number	Course Title	Theory/Lab (clock hours)
CSI1201	Sexual Assault Crime Scenes	6/14	20 Total

Course description:

The student will learn the special considerations of a crime scene involving a sexual assault. The student should be able to draw upon some of the skills that he/she has learned in prior weeks, including the importance of alternate light sources to collect biological materials, the swabbing and preserving of biological evidence, establishing and maintaining a chain of custody for said evidence and the importance of information taken from the crime victim. The student will have the opportunity in the lab to identify, preserve and collect pseudo biological materials and analyze victim statements for clues in the detection and collection of evidence.

Course Number	Course Title	Theory/Lab (clock hours)
CSI1202	Death Investigations	15/25	40 Total

Course description:

The student will learn the latest scientific and technological techniques in the field of death investigations. These techniques include locating and recovering DNA, trace evidence, establishing time of death, reviewing autopsy reports, and dealing with buried or decomposed remains. Numerous case studies will be reviewed and discussed and students will perform various collection and documentation procedures to challenge their thought process with regard to trace and latent evidence.

Course Number	Course Title	Theory/Lab (clock hours)
CSI1203	Human Remains Recovery	10/30	40 Total

Course description:

This course is designed for students who want to enhance their knowledge of modern forensic recovery techniques in an outdoor context. Human remains recovery requires specialized methods for proper evidence collection and preservation. The student will learn how to initially approach an outdoor crime scene that includes suspected human remains. Mapping, including triangulation and electronic measuring techniques, and the need to document and photograph all aspects will be stressed. Students will process both surface and buried human remains that will be followed by a review of the recovery efforts and decisions made by the student followed by a question and answer period.

Course Number	Course Title	Theory/Lab (clock hours)
CSI1401	Courtroom Testimony	5/11	16 Total

Course description:

The student will learn the basic rules of evidence for the introduction of crime scene evidence in a courtroom. The student will learn the proper foundations that are necessary to admit a piece of evidence and the required proof regarding chain of custody. The student will then learn how to be prepared to answer questions on direct examination where the student explains each action taken and each piece of evidence collected and submitted. The student will then learn how to defend his/her opinions through cross-examination.
